No advertising discontinued except on written order.

The Intelligencer will publish brief and rational letters on subjects of general interest when they are accompanied by the names and addresses of the authors and are not of a defamatory nature. Anonymous communications will not be noticed. Rejected manuscripts will not be returned.

In order to avoid delays on account of personal absence, letters to The Intelligencer intended for publication should not be addressed to any individual connected with the paper, but simply to The Intelligencer.

THURSDAY, MAY 25, 1916.

It's about time to go snipe hunting again.

Early to bed doesn't hold good for the following day.

A close shave is sometimes painful and prematurely we are feeling for Mr. Brandeis.

Bryan seems to think he'd get ducked again even with a prohibition plank to cross on.

Walking down the street in Spartanburg about 3 a. m. not many days ago we saw a policeman on duty.

It is said that there are printers today who still believe they will turn to an old gray mare when they die.

This funny stuff in the paragraph column must be an awful bore to the man with a "morning after" head.

What has become of the old-fashioned boy who used to practice his speeches from a stump deep down in the woods?

Funny how all the newspapers said the United States "may" not accept Germany's reply when they all know it would be accepted.

Negro Baby Falls Into Barrel of Lime and Lard. Nearly Smothered to Death—Condition Terrible—Broke into it faster than that.

When Ed DeCamp "gits goin'" he can tell the lambastedness fish story you ever heard. For this reason alone we wouldn't stay away from York for a soda pop.

All who would be willing to spend 25 cents for flowers were we to die can send us the two lots now. It's just the price to them. We must need it at the York convention.

The state asks what has become of the old-fashioned man who used to go out between acts and get a drink. It is very likely that he now stays away from the show looking for a Columbia glass.

Disappointments are daily happenings in the life of the newspaper man. The ones that are most marked are in the letters of the season for something fearful when his own is a case of "free time" from some special occasion on the part.

COULDN'T GIVE UP BRUSHY CREEK

The Greenville Piedmont of Wednesday publishes a story to the effect that a prominent Anderson county farmer of the Brushy Creek section, who was a visitor to that burg Wednesday, "expressed the hope in conversation that some day Brushy Creek township or at least a large part of it, may be taken out of Anderson and annexed to Greenville county."

That a great many Anderson county people in the extreme northern portion of the county, especially up in the Georgia Creek section and along the Saluda river feel kindly toward Greenville and even sympathize with her—is no doubt a fact, but we'd be willing to wager our new hat against The Piedmont's entire plant that there's not three native Anderson county men in that entire region, if the question were put to a vote who would be in favor of a foot of Anderson county going to Greenville county, even if it were possible to move the line that now separates the two counties—the Saluda river.

If the Piedmont should happen to doubt this we'd suggest that it "start the movement and have the election."

It is very inconvenient, it is true, for the people in that section to come to Anderson to do all their shopping, etc., but it is no less a hardship—in the event of the Piedmont's dream—than being forced to go to Greenville "to transact legal business." Brushy Creek is one of the greatest states in the Union—or the banner township of the world, and the only real criticism that has ever been made of it was this very thing; viz: a small sliver of it is within seven or eight miles of Greenville.

If it is agreeable with the folks up there you may have all of Pickens county, if you want it, but hurry single foot of Anderson, old Scout.

TRUE EDUCATION

The public schools are to produce good citizens. That is why taxes are paid to support education. Now, a good citizen is a person who is characterized by love, peace, joy, gentleness, long suffering, goodness, faith, temperance, meekness. These are the fruits of the spirit. They come from the intellect, knowledge, mental discipline, arithmetic or grammar. They originate in the spirit. What then should public education be but the development and strengthening of the spirit?

We can go on until doomsday stuffing the youth with knowledge and training the intellect and in the meantime clamor, controversy, contention, envy, bickering, overreaching, trying to get ahead, will keep up—when "many shall run to and from and knowledge shall be increased." See what knowledge does—everlasting gadding and discussing and contending and never settling anything. Train the spirit, develop the divine quality of the youth; or you don't educate him; you don't make a good citizen of him.

LAND OWNERSHIP IN MEXICO

In the United States the farmer is a humble person; in Mexico he is a king of millionaires. You look out across a level plain and you see a magnificent house of stone, cement and great timbers, covering sometimes as much as half an acre. Surrounding it are other houses hundreds of them, but all small, constructed of adobe, brush or even of cane stalks. You are not looking at a town, but a ranch settlement. In the great house—which costs many times more than all the little houses—live the hacendados and his family. In the little houses live the peons. The typical farm in Mexico is not of 160 acres, but of a million. In the State of Morelos twenty-eight hacendados own all the agricultural lands; twelve own nine-tenths of it. The territory of Quintana Roo, double the size of Massachusetts, is divided among eight companies. The greater portion of the State of Yucatan is held by thirty men, kings of steel hemp. A major fraction of the agricultural and grazing lands of Chihuahua is owned by one family. Lower California, equal in size to Alabama, is nearly all divided into Alabama, is nearly all divided by five great corporations. The 1,000,000 acre farms in Mexico are mostly owned by a few families. Mexico does not produce even enough corn and beans to feed her own population. Modern machinery is needed, but modern machinery will never be used extensively so long as the peon is so cheap that primitive methods are cheaper than modern methods.—World Outlook.

LINE O' DOPE

Weather Forecast—Fair Thursday and Friday.

Some idea of the visitors who have come to Anderson to see the performances of the "Birth of a Nation" can be obtained from a statement made by Capt. Archer of the Blue Ridge railway who stated yesterday that on Tuesday they handle over 500 passengers between Anderson and Wall-halla. All trains coming into and going out of Anderson were crowded and in several cases extra coaches had to be provided.

"I enjoyed the great picture very much," stated Mr. G. N. C. Boleman yesterday. "However, some of the things portrayed were not true to the historical happenings. There were never any pitched battles between the Ku Klux Klan and the negroes and their leaders as was depicted at one time in the picture. The work of the Ku Klux was done at night and in secrecy. Some of the men in the lower part of the state who had to hide out because of being identified with the Ku Klux came to Townville. I remember some of them stopped with my wife's father, Col. Tribble, and I know them very well. Three years ago when the state Old Soldiers reunion was held in Anderson I became acquainted with a gentleman from Laurens county who had the same name as one of the men who had been at Townville years previous. I began to ask him about the other fellow who had his name and finally he said that he remembered the people three very well for he was the same man."

With the rain of the past few days many of the farmers are beginning to sow peas in their stubble land. One farmer stated yesterday that he intended to sow several acres to be cut as forage. As usual there is a demand for peas. It is said they have been selling for $1.50 and $1.25 this season, which is much cheaper than they sold for several years ago.

There has been some complaint about the number of flies in the waiting room of the P. & N. and several people had something to say about it yesterday. There are no screen doors and there is no way of keeping the flies out.

Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Chisholm have purchased part of the Green property just north of North Anderson and facing on North Avenue. It is stated that the property was bought as an investment.

The annual meeting of the library association will be held this afternoon at 5.30 o'clock. All persons who have contributed $5 or more are members and are entitled to representation.

Some of the finest rye that has ever been raised in this section has been grown this season by J. F. Rice and on River Heights. The stalks and on River Heights. The stalks grew to exceedingly good height and the heads were filled out.

All who have seen the "Birth of a Nation" have been much impressed with that scene which shows young Cameron, the Confederate soldier, and young Stoneman, of the Union lines, meeting on the battle field. Cameron falls mortally wounded and just as Stoneman is about to thrust him with his bayonet he recognizes his young friend of the south and at whose home he had spent so many pleasant days. Just as the recognition is complete a bullet strikes Stoneman and he falls, also mortally wounded. He pulls himself close to his friend and enemy and they both die together. The following part of an editorial appearing in The Intelligencer last fall, and taken from the London Tablet from the Cross, proves that such things have happened and that today they are occurring on the battlefields of Europe. The following article tells of an occurrence very similar to the one shown in the picture:

"As soon as the first moments of distress which follow on all wounds had passed, I looked in front of me. Quite near me lay two soldiers mortally wounded; one a Bavarian, young and fair-haired, with a gaping wound in his stomach, was lying close to a young Frenchman, who had been stricken in the head. Both were in horrible pain, and their faces were growing paler and paler. I could not move, but I kept my eyes on them. I saw a little movement on the part of the Frenchman, who painfully slipped his hand under his coat for some thing hidden away on his breast. At last he drew from his hand and in it a little silver crucifix which he pressed to his lips, saying feebly but clearly, "Aye Maria, gratia plena," etc. And then as I watched I saw something more which moved me to tears. The German who had hitherto shown no sign of life—except a quick gasping respiration, opened his eyes, which were already glazing with approaching death, turned his head toward the Frenchman and murmured also in Latin, "Sancto Mater Die," etc. Their eyes met and they understood each other. In a sublime outburst of charity the Frenchman held out his crucifix to the German, who kissed it; then taking him by the hand the Frenchman said: "Having served our countries, let us go to God;" and the German added, "Reconciled." Their eyes closed, a shiver ran through their bodies and they passed away."

Spring.

Have you opened your eyes to the beauties around you, This wonderful morning in spring? The fairies and elves have touched all the trees With a wand of tenderest green. The violets vie with the buttercups glow. And everything's bright that's seen.

Have you opened your ears to the joy in the world, To the twitter of birds as they fly. As they build their nests and work away.

For the joys to come, by and by? Did you know, there's melody in every sound, If you only knew how to detect it. Just as there's good hovering always around.

If you did not suspect it? Have you opened your heart to the love in the world, To its beauty, grandeur and truth? They are easily found, when once you try, Though it's best to begin in one's youth.

To look and to listen, and to open our hearts to the beauties of nature and friends, That the Father above, in his infinite love, To His every creature sends. —Carrie Bassett Barnes in The Diocese of Tennessee.
